

www.birmingham.ac.uk/ebv50

Sunday 23rd - Tuesday 25th March 2014

Keble College, Oxford, UK.

This historic conference marks the 50th anniversary of the discovery of EBV, the first human tumour virus. It will be held in Keble College, Oxford, exactly 50 years after the virus' discovery was first announced by Epstein, Achong and Barr in a letter to The Lancet in March 1964. The conference will include invited reviews by current leaders in the field, plus selected oral presentations by junior investigators. Both days will include time for round table discussions and will finish with historical talks. Keynote speakers include Professor Sir Anthony Epstein, Professor George Klein and to represent the Henle Laboratory Nobel Laureate Harald zur Hausen.

This historic conference marks the 50th anniversary of the discovery of EBV, the first human tumour virus. It will be held in Keble College, Oxford, exactly 50 years after the virus' discovery was first announced by Epstein, Achong and Barr in a letter to The Lancet in March 1964.

The central themes will be to look back at the history of EBV research, take stock of where we are now and then project forward to identify the key challenges for the future. The programme will span the whole range of research on this virus and its associated diseases.

Registration

Residential Fee - £495

Registration includes, two nights bed and breakfast in Keble College accommodation, meeting attendance, refreshment breaks, lunches and Gala Banquet.

Accommodation includes, two nights bed and breakfast, single bedroom with en suite facilities (check in from 14.00 on Sunday 23rd - check out by 10.00 on Tuesday 25th March).

Additional accommodation

Additional accommodation is available on Saturday 22nd and Tuesday 25th March. This must be booked directly with Keble

Non-Residential Fee - £395

Registration includes, meeting attendance, refreshment breaks, lunches and Gala Banquet.

Contact us

www.birmingham.ac.uk/ebv50
med-cpdbookings@contacts.bham.ac.uk
@UoBCPD